

The Most Interesting Thing in Bradbury Heights.

ANNA SAUL (age 13). Bradbury Heights.

The Washington Post (1877-1954); Sep 8, 1929; ProQuest Historical Newspapers The Washington Post (1877 - 1990)
pg. JP2

The Most Interesting Thing in Bradbury Heights.

In Bradbury Heights, where I live, is a stone. This stone is the original Federal boundary stone, District of Columbia. It was placed there in the year 1791 to 1792. It is protected by Marcia Burns Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, 1916. On one side of the stone is Jurisdiction of the United States. Miles 2 A-2-4-E., Maryland, 1792. This stone is well weather beaten and it has an iron fence around it.

The D. A. R. puts a flag on it Fourth of July. We feel real proud of it when the tourist stops to look it over. The stone is 138 years old.

ANNA SAUL (age 13).

Bradbury Heights.
